

Life and Letter of Joseph Alleine

Table of Contents:

Introduction

Chapter 1

- The value of sacred biography
- The harmony of gifts in Alleine
- His diligence in private
- His praise and thanksgiving
- His writings

Chapter 2

- His birth and early indications of piety
- His predilection for the Christian ministry
- His university studies
- His early accomplishments
- His prayer life

Chapter 3

- His father
- Who he was as a man, a Christian, and a minister

Chapter 4

- His Secret Devotion in the open air
- His moral character and condescension to weak brethren
- His ministerial gifts, and desire for the conversion of souls
- His early rising and excessive labors

Chapter 5

- His ministerial course
- His going from house to house
- His reasons for private family instruction
- His faithfulness in reproof
- His questions for daily examination

Chapter 6

- His struggle with conformity
- Quitting the public situation which he held
- The anger of the Justice against him
- His resolution to go to China as a missionary
- His arrest
- His appearance before the Justice
- Behavior during his confinement
- Preaching before his departure to prison
- The respect shown by his people
- His lodgings and company in the prison of Ilchester
- Consecration of the prison
- Indictment at the sessions
- Studies and ministerial labors in confinement
- Conduct toward visitors and enemies
- Health in his imprisonment
- Release from prison, and earnestness in ministerial labors
- Great weakness and affliction
- Warrants issued against him
- A thanksgiving meeting with several ministers and friends
- Committed to the prison of Ilchester
- Exhortation to his fellow-sufferers
- He goes to the mineral wells
- He loses the use of his limbs
- His spiritual demeanor under affliction
- The kindness of the people of Dorchester
- His partial recovery
- Affectionate addresses to his friends from Taunton
- Return to Taunton
- Journey to Bath
- Last illness and death
- Courtship and marriage
- Management of his family
- Difficulties in fulfilling his ministry
- His temperance and care for the poor
- The care and provision of God for him

Chapter 7

- His inquiries into the spiritual state of others

- Table talk
- Assistance to those who were in doubts
- Patience under affliction

Chapter 8

- His personal character, stature, and constitution
- Judgment, memory, will, and affections
- Gravity, affability, charity, and utterance
- Studies, moderation, and humility
- Church-communion and obedience to authority
- Loyalty and respect to others
- Labors in the ministry
- Heroic spirit, singular piety, and contempt of the world
- Universal and uniform obedience
- Delight in self-examination
- Delight in meditation and praise
- Redeeming time

Chapter 9

- His consecration to God in Christ Jesus
- Divine love
- Spirit of Charity and Meekness
- Assurance of saving interest in Christ

CHRISTIAN LETTERS

- I. To his Wife on accepting the curacy of Taunton

To the People of Taunton

- II. Preparation for suffering
- III. Warning to professors
- IV. A call to the unconverted
- V. Trust in God and sincerity
- VI. Look out of your graves upon the world
- VII. Christian marks and duties
- VIII. How to show love to ministers and to live joyfully
- IX. Easy sufferings
- X. The love of Christ
- XI. Remember Christ crucified and crucify sin
- XII. Daily examination
- XIII. Motives and marks of growth

- XIV. Persuasion to sinners and comfort to saints
 - XV. How to live to God
 - XVI. Motives to set ourselves to please God
 - XVII. The worth of holiness
 - XVIII. Try yourselves and rejoice
 - XIX. The felicity of believers
 - XX. What do you do more than others?
 - XXI. Christian care, faith, and self-denial
 - XXII. Thinking rightly in suffering
 - XXIII. Counsel for salvation
 - XXIV. Examine whether you are in the faith
 - XXV. The characters and privileges of true believers
 - XXVI. The second coming of Christ
 - XXVII. The love of Christ
 - XXVIII. Warning to professors of their danger
 - XXIX. An admiration of the love of God
 - XXX. Personal and family godliness
-
- XXXI. To the people of Huntingdon: He that endureth to the end shall be saved
 - XXXII. To the people of Luppit: On perseverance
 - XXXIII. To a fellow-student: On backsliding
 - XXXIV. To his wife: Good counsel
 - XXXV. To his wife: Desires after heaven
 - XXXVI. To a friend: God is a satisfying portion
 - XXXVII. To a person of quality: Be constant

To his Cousin

- XXXVIII. Have you a treasure in heaven?
 - XXXIX. The concerns of our souls to be especially regarded
 - XL. Godly counsels
 - XLI. The virgin's care
-
- XLII. To a friend: Do all to God and his glory
 - XLIII. To a minister in prison: Prison comforts
 - XLIV. Direction to the ministers of Sommersetshire and Wiltshire, for catechizing families
 - XLV. To an intimate friend: The corruption of the heart unfolded
 - XLVI. To the people of Taunton: Christ's care and love for His people
 - XLVII. To the people of Taunton
 - XLVIII. To the people of Taunton
 - XLIX. To the people of Taunton

APPENDIX

A sermon preached by George Newton at Joseph Alleine's funeral

Reformation Heritage Books