Sentences

A: Are you okay?

B: I'm lonely.

A: Did you connect with any of your neighbors?

B: Yes, I chatted with one of them.

Dialogue

A: Hey, are you okay? You look a little sad.

B: I'm lonely. We moved to our new neighborhood four months ago, and I still don't have friends here. I want to make a friend on our street.

A: I'm sorry to hear that. Did you connect with any of your neighbors?

B: Yes, I met my next-door neighbor, Antoine, on Saturday. Antoine introduced me to his wife, Esther. She seems really sweet and she's interested in gardening, like me. Maybe we can get together sometime and chat.

A: That sounds great! I know it's miserable when you don't have friends in your neighborhood. Friendship is so important. Do your kids have friends in the neighborhood?

B: Yes! They hang out with their new friends every day.

Culture Box

Many Americans form friendships quickly.
They might call someone "my friend" after meeting just a few times.
They might have friends who live in many cities or states, since it is common for families to move for work or other reasons.

Grammar Box Third Person Singular -s Ending For simple present verbs, the third person singular form has an -s ending. No other simple present forms have this ending.
I connect with my friends.	We connect with our friends.
You connect with your friends.	You connect with your friends.
He connects with his friends. Mark connects with his friends. She connects with her friends. Jessie connects with her friends.	They connect with their friends.

Simon started a new job last month. On his first day, he didn't know anyone and felt _____. He really wanted to have a _____ with some of his coworkers, but he didn't know what to do. How should he _____ at work?

One day, Simon was reading a book at lunch when his coworker Vern came in the lunchroom. Vern saw the book and said, "Oh, I love that book!" Simon was excited. He could _____ with his coworker about books! Vern and Simon _____ about the book for twenty minutes. After work, when Simon was leaving, Vern _____ him to Shannon, another coworker. Shannon _____ books, too, and they walked together and talked about books.

The next morning, Simon was excited to go to work. He, Shannon, and Vern had a plan to _____ during lunchtime. He thought, "I'm not _____ now. I'm ready to go see my new friends again!"
